Obituary.

Eme Myrtle, daughter of Walker B. and Louisa Baker, was born in Balckow, Mo., Oct. 16, 1884, and departed life August 20, 1910, aged 25 years 10 months and 4 days.

When Myrtle was about 17 months old her father was called to his heavenly home and her mother with her six fatherless girls came to Rainsboro, her childhood home, and here the daughters were reared to womanhood, trained under the watchful care, loving discipline and heroic example of mother. They developed into earnest bread winners to care for themselves and minister comforts to the mother.

Three have married and are efficient mistresses of their own homes. Myrtle, as the youngest and perhaps mostly favored, did not feel herself exempt in the struggle for self-support and devoted her life to the work of a seamstress and went to Hillsboro last October to complete her education in that line.

In the second week of last March she was employed by Feibel Bros., as their bookkeeper and three weeks ago she was stricken with fever.

She suffered much through the long hot days and nights of this month of August, part of the time delirious, not knowing even the dear ones around her bedside. All was done that could be done to stay the dart of death, the skilled physician, the trained nurse, the loving service of family and friends, all could not avail.

In the morning watch of Saturday, August 20, death came and claimed her for his own, and the home circle that had not been invaded by death since the father was called so suddenly away more than twenty-four years ago, is now shrouded in gloom and burdened with sorrow and not only so but as the work of God declares "no man liveth to himself alone" so Myrtle's loving heart reached out for kindred spirits even beyond her own circle of kindred and many of her associates are crushed with grief because she is no more, but as we sit with bowed heads and sorrowing hearts, as we look upon the casket bearing the flowers and emblems of earthly love that she had awakened in so many hearts, does not the question arise, is this all? The book of Job in its precious meditations upon the changes that cometh to all raises the question, "If a man die shall he live again?"

And in the coming of God's son, our Redeemer, who came to bring life and immortality to light through the gospel, we find the answer, "Yes, man shall live again." For he who came to make all things new saith, "I am the Resurrection and the Life. He that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live again. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

There is a life within where the soul cries out for living bread, for something more precious and blessed than even the love of father, mother, brother or sister. That life Myrtle lived and to that life in its outward manifestations we turn.

In the winter of 1895, under the pastorate of John Trout, a revival meeting was held in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. Iselstein, of Springfield. A great awakening took place in which many were turned to righteousness. Among the number was Myrtle Baker, who was converted and joined the M. E. Church in which she remained a faithful and devoted member until her translation to the church triumphant. Conscientious and faithful in all her duties she realized as the Christian life developed that there was not that confidence and blessed fellowship in God's service that she desired and during the pastorate of Rev. Homer Curless in a revival service she knelt again at the altar and made a complete dedication of herself to God. The acceptance came as she was on her way home. God met her on the street and gave her the peace that passeth understanding and like the man of the Gospel she went to her home and told the loved ones of the family circle what great things the Lord had done for her.

A tribute from her Sunday School teacher may be inserted here as it fitly illustrates her position in the house of the Lord.

"As a member of the Sunday School she was ever faithful and was always ready to do whatever she was called to do. She will be greatly missed especially in our class, where we always found her and where she took a great interest. But our loss is Myrtle's gain. Let us live so we may meet her in that home bright and fair."

Always ready to do whatever she was called upon to do. How like the eulogy once pronounced by our Savior, "She hath done what she could." She was for some time the efficient and faithful secretary of our Sunday School and the floral tribute given by the school bears tribute of the esteem in which she was held and one has borne witness saying that whenever a call was made in the special meetings to surround the altar and give service to God, Myrtle was always ready and among the first to go. As we consider this are we not satisfied that she had found the pearl of great price, the treasure that Paul speaks of as being possessed by earthen vessels and that in her departure, "God hath recalled his own" and while we shall miss her in the home circle, the social circle and in the church, is it not true as her Sunday School teacher said, "our loss is her gain," and though her passage from our shore was through suffering, pain and weariness, tempest shock and ocean roar, yet if we could have stood on the other side and viewed the passage it would have been as beautiful as the passing of the bar.

"Twilight and evening star and one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.
But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too deep for sound or foam
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.
Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark.
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark;
For though from out our bourne of time and space
T'is noon may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

I take this opportunity to express the earnest and grateful thanks of the family to all, who by service and sympathy, have ministered to them and sought to alleviate the pain and bitterness of parting with the loved one and make special mention of E. O. Hetherington and wife, J. M. Murray and Feibel Bros.
